Reviewer General Comments and Suggestions (mandatory written feedback):

Word phrasing is awkward overall. Some word choices seem like "terms of art" not otherwise defined in general usage. At times the sentence constructions seemed "copy-pasted" from "Google translate."

Ideas were interesting, however the thread of the argument was hard to follow due to mechanics of writing.

Reviewer General Comments and Suggestions (mandatory written feedback):
The topic of this abstract is very timely, that is, the implication of current technology. However, the abstract is very heavy on the theoretical aspects. It would be really much more beneficial if the paper covers and discuss the methods and process in the application of this approach. The questions are also geared toward the political aspects of design. How could the political be tied back to the realm of design communication?

Reviewer General Comments and Suggestions (mandatory written feedback):

It is not clear what the critical point of the abstract is. The paper needs to have a specific angle at the vr application and use, rather than simply relaying it. It also needs to be grounded in the other research and context.
